Finding good notes is broken

Students lose hours every week to a problem that shouldn't exist.

Unreliable notes

Online resources vary wildly in quality. Students can't tell what's accurate, complete, or up to date until time is already wasted.

Too many platforms

Notes live across chats, shared drives, and random websites. There's no single place students know to look first.

No way to share

Passing notes to classmates means awkward DMs and broken links. There's no trusted channel built for students.

Wasted study time

Hours go into finding resources instead of using them. The search itself becomes a source of stress before exams.

Meet Studdy Buddy Hub

One free platform where students find and share class notes – no sign-up friction, no paywalls. Submitted by real students, organized for everyone.

to grasp those tough concepts. Click on a subject to see the available notes! For best experience, I recommend taking printouts of these notes and save them for reference in a file or folder. Handwritten notes work best as a hard copy, in are very detailed and you don't even need to refer to textbooks if you refer to my notes. However, I would suggest reading every single word of the textbooks to make yourself more prepared.

I'll keep updating the notes as I write them.
